Chelsea District Library Launches Annual Celebration of Songwriting

CHELSEA, MICHIGAN, August 25, 2017—Chelsea District Library announces its first celebration of the art and craft of songwriting, the CDL Song Fest 2017. CDL Song Fest 2017 will take place on Saturday, September 30 with special pre-Fest events on Thursday, September 28 and Friday, September 29. CDL Song Fest 2017 will feature family activities, a teen workshop, and opportunities to flex songwriting muscles plus, performances by local artists and nationally known songwriter, Paul Burch. The Song Fest is family friendly and open to the public. The full schedule and more information can be found by visiting chelseadistrictlibrary.org/songfest.

“The Song Fest had a terrific ten-year run in Ypsilanti,” said Lori Coryell, Executive Director, Chelsea District Library. “I am delighted that this program has found a new home in Chelsea. It's a natural fit! The Chelsea community enthusiastically embraces and celebrates the arts. We are thrilled to have Paul Burch -- who is so supportive of the mission of public libraries -- to share his unique vision of American roots music for our inaugural Song Fest.”

About Paul Burch

For more than two decades, Paul Burch’s unique vision of American roots music has attracted characters and collaborators from punk to honky tonk. “At the risk of being impeached by the bluegrass purists,” wrote legendary music critic Chet Flippo, “I think Burch is the best duet partner Ralph Stanley has found since his brother, Carter Stanley, died in 1966.”
